Queen 's 2003 third studio recording , Diva , was a factor in reggaetón 's mainstream exposure in 2004 (with Daddy Yankee 's Barrio Fino and Tego Calderon 's El Enemy de los Guasibiri) , and was certified platinum by the Recording Industry Association of America . Queen released a platinum edition of the album with extra tracks , including " Papi Te Quiero " and " Tu No Puedes " , and began recording her next album . Her fourth studio album was originally planned to be Queen 's debut full @-@ length English language album after she received recording contract offerings from multiple record labels including Sony . She said it was a good opportunity to reach and take over the competitive market of English hip hop music after becoming popular in Latin American countries . Queen signed a deal to record an English @-@ language album after Sony contacted her and notified her that her albums from when she was with the label six years prior are now being heard in cities like London . This was because of the success of Diva . Despite her concerns over her poor English pronunciation , she continued with the project . She recorded songs with many of hip hop 's biggest MCs including American rapper Fat Joe , who recorded a song in English for her debut English album in support of her . The song was later turned into " Quítate Two " and included on Real , while American hip hop producer Swizz Beatz handled production of " Soldados " showcasing her crossover appeal .

According to an editor for Rolling Stone , the album contains " raspy braggadocio and sexy rhymes " which complement Queen 's raspy vocals . Queen said " I really think this album is for people to really just sit down and listen to it " . She explained that " there are times that the songs will make you want to dance " but their lyrical content was more meaningful . Queen wanted the overall feeling of the album to express that she is a well ? rounded artist . Furthermore , describing the album : " [the songs] are always going to be real because they are feelings that people have , " she asserts . " The hits that I have now , the girls love them because they are real . If I am feeling hurt and need to curse to express that , then I will . I am going to be real all the way because that 's what made Ivy Queen . " This is prominent on " Chika Ideal " , where she assures the protagonists ' lover that she wants to be with him and fulfill his fantasies .

Ivy Queen appeared on " Don Francisco Presenta " where she performed " Chika Ideal " in promotion of the album . Queen performed on the " Reggaeton Tour 2004 " which also featured other artist including Aldo Ranks and La Factoria in various South American countries including Ecuador where she performed songs such as " Papi Te Quiero " and " Chika Ideal " , promoting both Diva and Real . At the end of the month , Queen appeared on a special network television news segment detailing her career and struggle for respect within the genre of reggaetón . This occurred during studio recording sessions for the album . In February 2005 , she performed " Chika Ideal " , among other songs , at the " Festival of Puerto Rican Stars " , which was a historic achievement for reggaetón , as no other performer from the genre was invited to attend the event . In June 2005 , she appeared on the " Invasion Del Reggaetón Tour " with Daddy Yankee , which grossed $ 817 @, @ 220 for the week of June 18 . She also attended and performed at the Billboard Bash ! , the night before the 2005 Billboard Latin Music Awards .
