SR 368 is located exclusively in northwestern Logan County . About 3 @,@ 100 vehicles travel on SR 368 on average each day .

The route begins at a T @-@ intersection (formerly a Y @-@ intersection) with SR 366 in McArthur Township about 1 @.@ 75 miles (2 @.@ 82 km) east of Russells Point . From there , it heads due north , abutted by a subdivision of cottages on the west side and open fields on the east side . After entering into the property of Indian Lake State Park , SR 368 bends to the northwest , passing amidst a blend of fields and trees as it crosses into Washington Township . The highway next passes an access road to a state park boat launch for Indian Lake .

As it turns to the north , SR 368 traverses into a heavily wooded area . Along this stretch , SR 368 passes into Stokes Township . It curves to the northeast as it departs the forest and enters into a neighborhood of cottages along a very narrow strip of land as it travels further out onto Indian Lake . After it travels through an S @-@ curve , SR 368 continues to the northeast , then bends to the northwest , crosses over an inlet and enters Shawnee Island . Turning to the west @-@ northwest , SR 368 passes amidst numerous houses and cottages on Shawnee Island . The highway then passes onto Seminole Island , on which the highway comes to an end as it arrives at an intersection where it meets CR 272 , which heads north from the intersection , and CR 286 , which departs to the southwest .

= = History = =

SR 368 made its debut in 1934 . It was originally routed along the exact alignment that it utilizes today . The only difference was that at the time , the route SR 368 met at its southern terminus was known as SR 32 , which a few years later would become US 33 .

In 1961 , US 33 was moved to a new alignment further south . Consequently , the SR 366 designation was applied to the former alignment of the U.S. highway . However , at the same time , SR 368 was extended east , running concurrent with SR 366 east to SR 117 north of Huntsville , where both routes arrived at a shared terminus . This remained the case until 1979 , when SR 368 was restored back to its original alignment , leaving SR 366 as the solo route between SR 368 and SR 117 .
