= = History = =

Route 182 was originally defined as a segment of pre @- @ 1927 Route 12 . However , it was not maintained by the state , and instead , maintained by the county . The highway remained the same until 1927 , which is when it became a part of Route S24 , which was assigned as a spur off of Route 24 . The parent highway , Route 24 , was assigned as a highway to run from Schooley 's Mountain west to Penwell . There , Route S24 would terminate , but the direct highway was not improved by the county . Instead of the original decision , Route 24 was assigned to end at Hackettstown , where the two highways would intersect at the southern end of Route 182 .

The next change to the highway , was in 1953 , when the New Jersey State Highway Department renumbered the highway system around the state . This time , Route 24 was defined to run along the alignment of the now @- @ decommissioned Route S24 . Now , Route 24 ran along a new alignment , including a part which was supposed to be temporary . The entirety of current Route 57 was also assigned as Route 24 . That year , the state took over the alignment that was maintained by the county . The final change in highway alignment around Hackettstown occurred on October 9 , 1969 . This time Route 24 was truncated off the alignment of current Route 57 , and now ended in Hackettstown , at the three @-@ way intersection . The older alignment of Route 57 did not retain its designation , as plans developed to make a bypass of Hackettstown , continuing the highway from Phillipsburg to U.S. Route 46 just east of Hackettstown . However , plans never finished , and instead , the designation of Route 182 was assigned to the original alignment of Route 57 .
