New York State Route 323 ( NY 323 ) was a state highway in Erie County , New York , in the United States . The route was 5 @. @ 24 miles ( 8 @. @ 43 km ) long and stretched from the town of Brant to the hamlet of Evans Center within the town of Evans . NY 323 began at an intersection with NY 249 and County Route 9 ( CR 9 ) in Brant and headed north to a junction with NY 5 in Evans Center . In between , it passed over the New York State Thruway ( Interstate 90 or I @-@ 90 ) and intersected U.S. Route 20 ( US 20 ) .

The route was assigned as part of the 1930 renumbering of state highways in New York . It went unchanged until 1980 when ownership and maintenance of the route was transferred from the state of New York to Erie County as part of a highway maintenance swap between the two levels of government . The designation was officially removed on August 14 , 1980 . The former routing of NY 323 is now the northern half of CR 9 .

NY 323 began at an intersection with NY 249 and CR 9 north of the Cattaraugus Indian Reservation in Brant . The route headed northward as Brant ? Angola Road through a rural area dominated by open fields and forests . It proceeded to the Brant ? Evans town line , where it met Cain Road ( CR 491 ) a short distance south of the New York State Thruway ( I @-@ 90 ) . The highway progressed onward , passing over the Thruway on its way to a junction with Dunfee Road , a connector leading to US 20 . NY 323 met US 20 itself a short distance to the northwest .

The route headed northwest from US 20 , intersecting with Pontiac Road ( CR 490 ) as it curved back to the north and entered the village of Angola . Within Angola , NY 323 followed Main Street northward past several blocks of homes and business . At Orchard Avenue , the street turned to the northwest , roughly paralleling Big Sister Creek as both exited the village limits . Past this point , the amount of development along the route dropped slightly as it continued northward toward the hamlet of Evans Center . NY 323 crossed over Big Sister Creek south of the community before ending at a junction with NY 5 in the center of the hamlet .
