

$\gcd(a, b) = 1$, then a and b are said to be coprime (or relatively prime) . This property does not imply that a or b are themselves prime numbers . For example , neither 6 nor 35 is a prime number , since they both have two prime factors : $6 = 2 \times 3$ and $35 = 5 \times 7$.