Robson was born on 21 January 1994 in Melbourne , Australia , the third child of Australian parents Andrew , an oil executive with Royal Dutch Shell , and Kathy Robson , a sports coach and former professional basketball player . Robson and her family moved from Melbourne to Singapore when she was 18 months old , and then to the United Kingdom when she was six .

According to her parents , she began playing tennis " as soon as she could hold a tennis racquet " , and after being encouraged by them , she entered a junior tennis academy at age seven . She signed with management company Octagon when she was 10 , with Adidas at age 11 , and also signed a racquet deal with Wilson Sporting Goods .

After working with several coaches , including the head of the Lawn Tennis Association Carl Maes , she chose coach Martijn Bok in 2007 . Bok said later that although Robson " had trouble staying emotionally under control " , he " saw right away ... a lot of potential in Laura . " Robson also began training at the National Tennis Centre , under the guidance of Bok , Maes , and the head of women 's tennis at the centre , Nigel Sears , while taking school lessons at home .
