New York State Route 275 ( NY 275 ) is a north ? south state highway in Allegany County , New York , in the United States . It runs for 11 @. @ 47 miles ( 18 @. @ 46 km ) , connecting the village of Bolivar and NY 417 at its southern end with the hamlet of Friendship to the north , where it intersects the Southern Tier Expressway ( NY 17 and Interstate 86 or I @- @ 86 ) by way of an interchange . The road continues north past the interchange to NY 19 in Belfast as County Route 17 ( CR 17 ) . NY 275 was assigned as part of the 1930 renumbering of state highways in New York to the portion of its routing south of Friendship . It was extended slightly northward in the mid @- @ 1970s to connect to the Southern Tier Expressway .

NY 275 begins at the intersection of Wellsville and Main streets in the village of Bolivar . At this point , NY 417 switches from South Main Street to Wellsville Street while NY 275 proceeds northeastward on the two @- @ lane Main Street . The route initially passes by commercial buildings in the village 's business district ; however , they quickly give way to more residential areas after just two blocks . As the highway heads away from the village center , the homes become scattered ahead of intersections with the eastern terminus of County Route 5A ( CR 5A , named Salt Rising Road ) and the south end of CR 40 ( Deans Flat Road ) . The rural trend soon reverses as NY 275 enters the adjacent village of Richburg . Here , NY 275 is also known as Main Street as it serves Richburg 's business district and the surrounding residential neighborhoods .

Past Richburg , NY 275 continues on a northeasterly track through the rural town of Wirt , running along the base of a narrow , largely undeveloped valley surrounding Little Genesee Creek as East Notch Road . The highway slowly increases in elevation for about 2 @. @ 5 miles ( 4 @. @ 0 km ) , intersecting with the western terminus of CR 8 ( Inavale Road ) and passing a handful of farms on its way toward East Notch , a gap between two large hills that serves as Little Genesee Creek 's source . It eventually turns north to traverse the pass before winding its way down the opposite side . A short distance later , NY 275 intersects with the northern terminus of CR 8 as it curves to take a northwesterly track into the town of Friendship .

Just north of the town line , NY 275 enters the hamlet of Nile , where it becomes a two @- @ lane residential street named Pennsylvania Avenue . In the center of the community , the route meets the east end of CR 1 ( Fifth Avenue ) . From here , NY 275 bends back to the north , crossing through rural sections of the town of Friendship mostly populated by farms . The rural surroundings end ahead of the hamlet of Friendship , where NY 275 heads through the residential western portion of the community . Near the center of Friendship , the highway intersects CR 20 ( West Main Street ) , the primary east ? west street through the hamlet . NY 275 continues on , crossing over the Norfolk Southern Railway 's Southern Tier Line ( formerly the Erie Railroad 's Main Line ) to reach exit 29 of the Southern Tier Expressway ( I @- @ 86 and NY 17 ) . NY 275 ends at the exit ramp leading away from the westbound direction of the freeway ; however , NY 275 's right @- @ of @- @ way continues north to NY 19 in Belfast as CR 17 .

= = History = =

NY 275 was assigned as part of the 1930 renumbering of state highways in New York to the portion of its modern alignment between the village of Bolivar and the hamlet of Friendship . At the time , NY 275 's northern terminus was at its intersection with West Main Street ( now CR 20 ) in Friendship , then part of NY 63 and later NY 408 . In the early 1970s , the portion of the Southern Tier Expressway near Friendship was completed and opened to traffic . However , NY 275 continued to end at NY 408 in Friendship until the mid @- @ 1970s when NY 408 was truncated to Nunda . As a result , NY 275 was extended a short distance northward to meet the Southern Tier Expressway at exit 29 .
