Dunder Mifflin Paper Company , Inc. is a paper sales company featured in the United States television series The Office . It is analogous to Wernham Hogg in the British original of the series , and Papiers Jennings and Cogirep in the French Canadian and French adaptations respectively . Originally , the company was completely fictitious , but eventually the brand was used to sell products at Staples and other office supply outlets .

Two websites have been created to support the fictional company , NBC sold branded merchandise at its NBC Universal Store website . Its logo was prominently displayed in several locations in downtown Scranton , Pennsylvania , where the show is set . Scranton has been associated internationally with Dunder Mifflin due to the show 's international reach . In a 2008 St. Patrick 's Day speech in the suburb of Dickson City , then @-@ Prime Minister of Ireland Bertie Ahern made a reference to the city 's fictional branch office .

A fourth @-@ season episode , " Dunder Mifflin Infinity " , said the company was founded in 1949 by Robert Dunder and Robert Mifflin , originally to sell brackets for use in construction . The fifth @-@ season episode " Company Picnic " said that the co @-@ founders met on a tour of Dartmouth College . U.S. News and World Report likens it to many real companies in its size range : " It is facing an increasingly competitive marketplace . Like many smaller players , it just can 't compete with the low prices charged by big @-@ box rivals like Staples , OfficeMax and Office Depot , and it seems to be constantly bleeding corporate customers that are focused on cutting costs themselves . " The show 's creators share this assessment ? " It 's basically a Staples , just not as big " , says co @-@ producer Kent Zbornak ? as do some of those companies . " Since Dunder Mifflin could be considered among our competitors " , says Chuck Rubin , an Office Depot executive , " I think Michael Scott is actually the perfect person to run their Scranton office . "

The company was depicted as based in New York City , with branches in smaller Northeastern cities . Episodes are set in the Scranton branch , but other branches have been mentioned and seen . The now @-@ closed Stamford , Connecticut , branch was seen when Jim Halpert ( John Krasinski ) transferred there during the first half of the third season . Another episode , " Branch Wars " , gave viewers a brief glimpse of the Utica branch , one of several purportedly in upstate New York . Zbornak says that city was on the short list for where to base the show , with some of its writers having ties to Central New York , and that they always intended for at least a branch office to be located there , for reasons of phonetics . " Utica was just such a different @-@ sounding name than Scranton , " Zbornak says . But also , " we had done a little research and thought our kind of business could survive in Utica . "

A Buffalo branch has been mentioned in several episodes , and a Rochester office was also mentioned in the episode titled " Lecture Circuit " . The Dunder Mifflin website also lists a Yonkers branch . Albany rounds out the New York locations , which in a deleted scene in " Stress Relief " is revealed to have closed , leaving three other branches in other states : Akron , Ohio ; Camden , New Jersey ; and Nashua , New Hampshire . In " Company Picnic " , it is announced that the Camden and Yonkers branches have closed , and that the Buffalo branch is about to close . In " Boys and Girls " , a Pittsfield branch was mentioned , until Jan shut it down when their warehouse workers unionized . The episode " Turf War " focuses on the closing of the Binghamton branch , and how reps from the Syracuse branch are competing with Scranton employees for Binghamton 's old clients .

Business writer Megan Barnett has pointed out parallels between Dunder Mifflin and the real @-@ life W.B. Mason paper company , based near Boston , in Brockton , Massachusetts . It is similarly regional in focus , serving corporate customers in New England and the Mid @-@ Atlantic states . Like Dunder Mifflin , its original product line ( rubber stamps ) was something other than paper , and it faces stiff competition from national and international chains . It , too , has a branch office in Stamford , but Mason 's has remained open . In 2009 , it had an accounting scandal that resulted in a $ 545 @, @ 000 payment to corporate customers , much as Dunder Mifflin had to deal with the arrest of Ryan Howard for fraud the year before .

= = = Depiction of corporate culture = = =

The company 's " clearly dysfunctional " top @-@ down management style is a major source of tension on the show , notes Chicago @-@ based writer Ramsin Canon . Corporate headquarters rejects the television commercial Michael created , as he in turn insisted on his own ideas for the commercial and ignored his employees . Ryan Howard ( B. J. Novak ) , who began as a temp , becomes Michael 's new boss because he has an M.B.A. despite never having sold any paper or paper products . Michael , in turn , treats his own employees the same way . The show 's depiction of a dysfunctional corporate culture has led some commentators to liken Dunder Mifflin to the software maker Initech in Mike Judge 's cult comedy Office Space and the nameless company in which the Dilbert comic strip is set .

Dunder Mifflin is also depicted as struggling to accommodate the demands of a diverse workforce . Episodes have focused on sensitivity training sessions and other informal efforts . Sexual harassment has occurred often enough , however , that it has lent its name to an episode . Employment lawyer Julie Elgar started a blog analyzing each episode for plot developments likely to be actionable if they occurred in real life and estimating the legal bill and / or possible verdict the company would incur should a suit be filed ? as Michael 's former supervisor , Jan Levenson ( Melora Hardin ) did in one episode , alleging wrongful termination . Greg Daniels , the show 's creator , said many episode plotlines are in fact based on anecdotes recounted during the sensitivity training he and the other members of the show 's cast and crew are required to take annually as employees of NBC , a General Electric subsidiary . The episode " Boys and Girls " showed that the company strongly resisted unionization efforts by its employees , to the point of closing down a branch , as many real companies do or threaten to do in the same situation .

= = Locations and sets used = =

The office and warehouse of the Scranton branch office are sets on the production company 's office in Van Nuys , California ( a real office was used in the show 's first season ) . The parking lots and exterior of the building are likewise the exterior of the building ( except in the first season , when the building 's exterior was different because a different shooting location was used ) . Since the stage set had no windows , writer Jennifer Celotta 's office was dressed to look like Michael Scott 's when the script called for him or someone else to look out the window into the parking lot . In the second and subsequent seasons , the office interiors and exteriors are at a different location in Van Nuys .

Some viewers have presumed that the Pennsylvania Paper & Supply Company 's tower , a downtown Scranton landmark which appears in video footage shot by cast member John Krasinski for the show 's opening credits , is the Dunder Mifflin office . The real company , which also sells paper and office supplies , has welcomed the exposure ( and increase in business ) and has a ground @-@ floor showroom where it sells both its products and T @-@ shirts with the tower . It plans to add a Dunder Mifflin logo to the circular insets near the top of the tower . Mifflin Avenue ends adjacent to the Penn Paper & Supply building .

The success of the show has led to the sale of actual products with the Dunder Mifflin logo as souvenirs . NBC sells branded T @-@ shirts , mugs , calendars and other items at its website , as well as in the NBC store located in New York City . In 2006 , the website 80stees.com ranked Dunder Mifflin second only to Duff Beer from The Simpsons as the best fictional brand .

At the first annual The Office convention in Scranton in 2007 , fans who had paid for reserved seating at an " uncommon stockholders meeting " in the Mall at Steamtown received an annual report and complimentary ream of paper . A nearby elevator shaft is also decorated with the company logo . While the Scranton branch 's address , 1725 Slough Avenue , does not actually exist ( the street name was invented as a tribute to the original British version of the show , set in Slough , near London ) , the company logo can be seen two places in the city 's downtown section outside the mall : on one of the pedestrian overpasses along Lackawanna Avenue , and a lamppost banner in front of City Hall .

Two websites purporting to be the company 's exist. dundermifflin.com is the main site , with basic information about the company , and dundermifflininfinity.com , which is allegedly the company intranet , serves as an official NBC fansite . The latter site was shut down around January 2014 but is viewable through the Wayback Machine

In November 2011 , Staples Inc. announced that they are selling their own product of manufactured paper under the " Dunder Mifflin " name , under license from NBC 's parent company , Comcast . The Dunder Mifflin products are produced and sold by Quill.com , a wholly owned subsidiary of Staples . The brand expanded its paper product line beyond manufactured paper in November 2012 .
