Dunderdale turned professional in 1906 ? 07 season with the Winnipeg Strathconas . He played three seasons for the franchise , which was also known as the Winnipeg Maple Leafs and the Winnipeg Shamrocks , scoring on average more than two points per game , with the majority of the points being goals . In 1909 ? 10 , Dunderdale moved east , and played with the Montreal Shamrocks , first with the Canadian Hockey Association , and later with the National Hockey Association ( NHA ) . That season , he appeared in 15 games overall , and scored 21 goals . He played the 1910 ? 11 season for the Quebec Bulldogs of the NHA , finishing second on the team in scoring , with 13 goals , even though he played only nine out of 16 games , and receiving 25 penalty minutes .

Dunderdale went back west in the 1911 ? 12 season , joining the Victoria Aristocrats of the newly formed Pacific Coast Hockey Association ( PCHA ) . He would spend the rest of his career playing in the west , having played only two seasons east of the Manitoba @-@ Ontario border . Scoring 24 goals in 16 games , Dunderdale received his first out of six First All @-@ Star team selections in the PCHA , as well as his first of four consecutive . In the next two seasons , Dunderdale recorded similar statistics to his first season in the PCHA , again scoring 24 goals in both seasons , and he was named to the First All @-@ Star team in both seasons . The 1912 ? 13 season saw the Victoria Aristocrats challenge the Quebec Bulldogs for the Stanley Cup . Although the Aristocrats won the series , their challenge was not accepted by the Stanley Cup trustees . The 1914 ? 15 season saw Dunderdale named to the First All @-@ Star team for his fourth consecutive time , as he scored 17 goals and assisted on 10 others , for 27 points in 17 games .

In the 1915 ? 16 season , Dunderdale joined the Portland Rosebuds . In his first season with the Rosebuds , he dropped below a point per game for the first time in his career . The Rosebuds became the first American team to challenge for the Stanley Cup that year , losing a best @-@ of @-@ five series 3 ? 2 to the Montreal Canadiens . Dunderdale played in all five games of the series , scoring two points . The following season , he scored 22 goals in 24 games , returning to his usual offensive output . However , he was more noted that season for his number of penalty minutes , setting a league record with 141 minutes . The 1917 ? 18 season was his last in Portland , as he scored 14 goals in 18 games . Dunderdale left as their leading penalty minute getter , and as their second @-@ most prolific goal scorer , with 50 goals .

Dunderdale rejoined the Victoria Aristocrats in the 1918 ? 19 season . After recording only nine points in 20 games in his first season back with the Aristocrats , he scored 26 goals in 22 games in the 1919 ? 20 season , en route to his fifth First All @-@ Star team selection . Dunderdale played three more seasons for Victoria , which was renamed from the Aristocrats to the Cougars for the 1921 ? 22 season , playing 75 games in total and scoring 41 points . He scored a bit under a point per game during the 1920 ? 21 and the 1921 ? 22 season , while in the 1922 ? 23 season , his last with Victoria , he was limited to only two goals in 27 games . He was named for his sixth time to the First All @-@ Star Team in 1922 . Following the conclusion of the 1922 ? 23 season , the PCHA folded . Dunderdale played another season in the West Coast Hockey League ( WCHL ) , splitting the 1923 ? 24 season between the Saskatoon Crescents and the Edmonton Eskimos , scoring three points in 17 games overall .

Dunderdale is credited with scoring the first penalty shot goal in history . The first goal was scored on 12 December 1921 by Dunderdale on Hugh Lehman . The shot was taken from one of three dots painted on the ice 35 feet ( 11 m ) from the goal . Players had to skate to the dot and shoot the puck from the dot .
